Expressions aplenty

Working late on activities Michelle Davis takes time out to convince a wandering mutt that LHS just is not for dogs.

Tattered and ripped, the National and State of Virginia flags wave forlorn in front of LHS. Symbols of pride, we sure need new ones!

Fall doldrums hit LHS on a sunny Friday. David Mays and Teresa Painter seem to be distracted while Rocky Smith catches the action elsewhere.

Making a drawing for one of Mr. Bond's many required lab reports, Tommy Crowder concentrates on an exact sketch.

Somewhere between concentration and day-dreams, Mary Ellen Doss tries tuning in to French dialogues and vocabulary.

Hypnotized by swinging beads, an elementary student is caught in a pow-wow between Chief Hayes and Mr. Hickerson.

School ecology is boosted along by Hilda Ayers as she whistles while she works. Keeping LHS clean was a trying part of school life.

During lunch, Rob Mish, pauses to think of an answer to a somewhat funny remark. The rest of the class awaits the answer.

Getting ready to go outside to march in the freezing weather with the band, Dan Coffey puts one arm in his coat as he slowly gets ready.

Listening avidly to one of her teachers, Anita Johnson, seems to be truly concentrated on her assignment for the day.

Doing what comes naturally — luvin' in the halls — don't look under the stairs. Cats in German classes and buying lunch tickets . . . taking a napkin to chuckwagon steaks. Mustard graffiti on hot dog buns. Remember? Remembrances repose . . . anxiously waiting to be brought to light. "Teachers, please note number two on the daily bulletin." Students congregate at the newly located smoking porch. Particles that combine and intertwine. Magnetized or repelled by each other. Speeding along, totally emersed in activities of our own. So fast we can't or don't remember. Taking no time to recognize the unrecognizables. Ordering a la carte. Class meetings . . . black and white together. Race is not as much a problem to students at LHS as to the people who see the students. Automatically passing into a new year. we forget the years before.

For her, it's not a question of if, but when. She's already started her own business, and she's not alone. More and more students are doing the same.

The rebirth of embroidery and crocheting is obvious everywhere. Ever stop to count the students and teachers with needlework in their hands? Fashion has become a conglomeration of originality to bring back the clothes of grandma's time. Students are more adventurous. Classes outside develop.

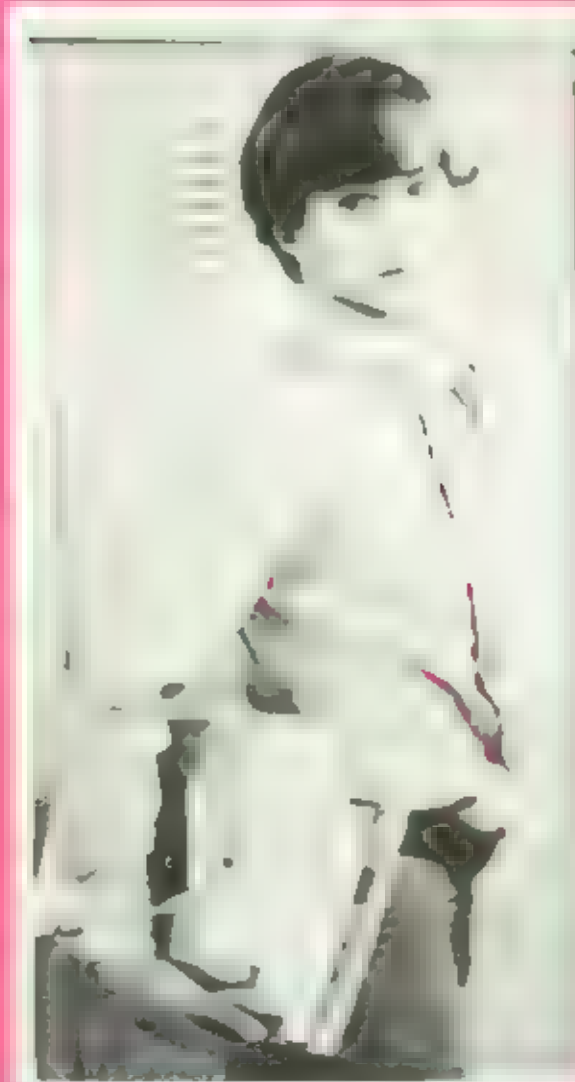

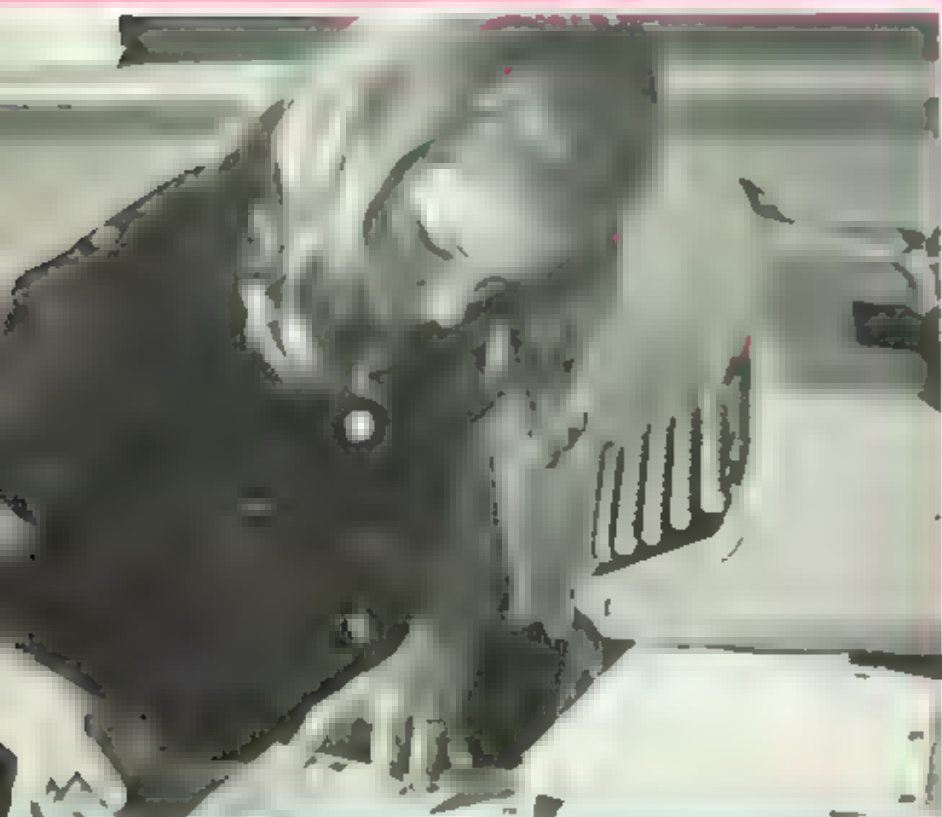

Who knows what and the Advanced Biology class embarks

They're what made this year. Are they to be thrown off like skipping stones, to be pushed to the backs of our minds? Maybe they are just like things, but things could be things.

Activation activities—extra curricular events. Clubs take students outside the classroom. There are provisions for every and all kinds of students. Diversions from the academic side of life.

A portfolio of activities for students of the like. Student government for the politicians, honor societies for the brains, yearbook, newspaper and literary magazine for the budding journalists. For the actors, arguers and speech makers there are drama and public speaking. There are academic clubs for academically minded people and service clubs for civic minded people. A change comes over LHS. A student's mind is his own. The day of belonging to a certain club as a status symbol is gone. Individualistic thinking is the individual. The time for belonging to what interests a person is here. Interested persons that are tied up the clubs. To each his own.

The Art Club enjoys a few moments respite with a humorous story told by Ms. Burns before getting back to planning projects

The Art Club sponsored by Ms. Burns, attempts to increase members' knowledge of all forms of art. This year the club had a Boutique to raise money for a trip to Richmond.

In Richmond, they visited the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts, The Schindler Gallery, a private gallery which was displaying the work of Barkley Sheaks, the Valentine Museum and Byrd Park. At the Boutique a wide assortment of the members' handiwork was sold including leather goods, macramé wall hangings, key chains, Christmas ornaments and paintings. They made over $200 from the Boutique and hope to use what was left after the Richmond trip for a picnic in late May. The club is also planning an art show in which anyone can enter their work to be judged

Students engage in fine arts in Chorus and Art Club

The strains of music can be heard drifting from the music room at all hours during the day. Of course, the music we happen to be speaking of comes from the melodious voices of the chorus. The chorus is divided into two parts: Chorus I and the Concert Choir. The results of these many hours of practice may be heard at a number of performances. The choirs sang at open house for the parents and twice again at Christmas for both the students and the public. And not forgetting graduation, they joined their voices in the most appropriate songs. Those choristers excelling in choral performance attended the All-Regional Chorus. Once there, they gained valuable singing experience.

It's totally new! The Scarlet Hurricane Band under the direction of a new conductor, Mr. Joseph J. Sayblack, Jr., has gone up and up and . . . up. The 56 members were hardly recognizable from last year with their new uniforms. The uniforms added the final touch of confidence to marching band members as they struggled with precision drill, heading for their appearance at the Parry McCluer football game. They proved that LHS band has really "come of Age" at Winter, Spring, and Pops concerts.

Selling everything from toothbrushes to tickets for a pancake breakfast, LHS musicians worked their way to the District V Band Festival and sent representatives to the All County and Regional Bands. With all the changes wrought this year, we can only wait with pride for our Scarlet Hurricane Band to appear next year with . . . who knows what improvements?

held by the cheerleaders for banquets for the players

For all those that think cheerleading is a glory job, think twice. Last summer the varsity squad spent 5 days at camp. It was up at 7:30 every morning and worked all day till late hours at night. For all their efforts they received a first place trophy.

During the hot summer months they practiced two or three times a week. They also practiced twice a week during the year working on new cheers and hand chants. They made numerous posters, football men and basketballs for the players lockers. They bought oranges for the teams and held pep rallies, banquets and luncheons for the players. To raise the money for these projects, the cheerleaders held a bakesale and sold chocolate pollywogs and miniature LHS megaphones.

The JV's worked equally as hard as the varsity. They practiced once a week during the summer. During school they held practice two or three times each week. After having to wear hand-me-downs for several years, the JV's looked toward a new goal. New uniforms! They held bake sales and sold candy to raise the money. Finally the money was raised and the uniforms arrived in time for basketball season. The JV squad was also a great help to the varsity. They ushered for pep rallies, participated in them and helped with the Homecoming bonfire. They also sold programs at football games. Not forgetting the JV teams, they were treated with oranges, apples, fireballs and lolly-pops from the JV cheerleaders.

The Chemistry-Physics Honor Society, which was founded in 1949 by Miss Elizabeth Dunlap as the Chemistry Honor Society was Lexington High School's first honor society. The membership was extended to honor students in Physics 12. The change in name followed a few years later. The Chemistry-Physics Honor Society is affiliated with the Virginia Junior Academy of Science. Its objectives are to recognize students for excellence in Chemistry 11 and Physics 12 and to encourage interest in science at Lexington High School.

The Co-ed Hi-Y is a relatively small group. But the enthusiasm of the members makes up for its smallness. It is a Christian organization with a purpose to create, maintain, and extend throughout the home, school and community, high standards of Christian character. Activities of the year consisted of attending the Hi-Y district conference at Bath County High School, and a money-making project selling cloth calendars to buy decorations and artificial Christmas trees to place in the nursing home of the hospital.

A dedicated few on the Crystal staff work hard to produce the best Crystal ever

A Crystal year lasts from June to June. When the Crystal for one year is finished in June the staff immediately starts in on the next year's book. It's work, work, work all the time. Most people don't realize what goes into designing a book that will cover all aspects of the school year. Last June, Michelle Davis and Debbie Miller spent a week at a publications camp. Most nights they were up until 2:00 working on designs and reading over some thirty different themes, hoping to find a suitable one for LHS. But, for all the hard work it was great fun seeing other yearbooks, and they came home loaded with ideas. Among those include spot color, a less expensive way to get color in the book and new designs for the pages.

Several members of the staff have attended weekend workshops in Charlottesville. These provide refresher courses and also offer new ideas. Members of the staff usually work after school three days a week. More often than not, when it's near deadline time, they work everyday of the week including all day Saturdays and Sundays. The Crystal staff also takes care of senior portraits and the signing party in August. Then in September and October it's class pictures, group pictures and the magazine drive. The subscription drive always takes up a week or more in February and the staff held a picture sale to raise money to send more people to camp. But, for all the work, it's worth seeing the finished product.

The Distributive Education clubs of America have one of their branches right here in Lexington. Although they don't go to many state or national conventions they keep in touch. D E sponsored a soc-hop in October with the D E Club band playing. This is one way they earn money. Other sources of getting money are from collecting dues to other fund raising projects. The money goes to such club activities as the fall rally in Buena Vista and a field trip to Krogers in Salem. In its second year of existence, the Drill Team worked continuously to keep up its excellent showing. They were led by head, Vickie Jarvis and squad leaders Lorie Miller, Peggy Brown, Desi Lou Bane and Joyce Montgomery. All are second year veterans. An increase in membership added to their excellent performances. Most of their showings included intricate precision drills. They also included pom poms, umbrellas and flags in many of their routines. New uniforms greatly improved the appearance of the group.

Leading the band and drill team in performances and parades, Wanda Neice proudly displays the American flag with a radiant smile.

The Future Business Leaders of America is the national organization for students enrolled in business courses. It is operated under the high school business program. The club's most important plans included a trip to Richmond to visit the Federal Reserve Bank. To raise the money for the trip, members of the club sold calendar towels to the people of the community. Debbie Jarvis and Chris Clark attended the FBLA Leadership Conference. They also sent representatives to the Spring Conference and the State Conference.

"Learning to Do, Doing to Learn, Earning to Live, Living to Serve"

This is the motto of the Future Farmers of America. The one hundred sixty-three members of the club are celebrating their twenty-fifth anniversary. The FFA engaged in five federation contests including shop, dairy, forestry, livestock and public speaking. This large and busy club placed two firsts, one second, third and fourth respectively. Their officers attend an officer training course at Riverheads High School and start one for the Millrock Federation. The boys engaged in a joint FHA-FFA meeting and a federation basketball contest. The FFA also enjoyed a Christmas party.

They built many objects for sale in shop, encouraging the members to gain confidence in their ability to work efficiently and think clearly. Utilizing a projected income of $1,300, the club built a float which placed second in the Lexington and Buena Vista parades. With a radio program and a banner over Main Street, they honored national FFA week. At the annual Father-Son banquet, some of the charter members of the club (from the first year) were recognized and honored for their work in starting the club. Among those honored was Mr. D. L. Glick, the well-liked and remembered first advisor of the club. Learning and using skills in agricultural fields of work, the dairy and livestock judging teams compete for the state title. Small yet active, FHA girls acquire many home skills

The Future Homemakers of America is an organization that extends the home economics program outside the classroom. The girls do not need to be enrolled in a home economics course to be a member of the club. To finance projects, the FHA held a soc-hop for students during football season. At Christmas time they participated in the Christmas basket program and held their annual Christmas party. They held a joint FHA, FFA meeting and a Mother-Daughter Banquet

The money they made also went to pay dues for state affiliation and to send a delegate to the state convention. The club entered an educational exhibit at a fair in Roanoke and won first prize. During the week of March 19th-25th, National FHA week was held. Members of the club participated by making posters, holding radio spots and placing an article in the local newspaper. On the day of the 22nd, the girls wore tags to show their membership in the FHA.

Self-expression along with time and work add into Forensics

After school in various English and history rooms, you will see students and teachers devoting hard work and time to a program known as Forensics. It is a form of interschool competition which leads to district and state championships in the areas of original oratory, extemporaneous speaking, spelling and reading of prose and poetry. In their first invitational meet with Riverheads and Fort Defiance they came in third place but later beat Harrisonburg in their second meet. Winners in the invitational meets are allowed to continue on in the district and state meets. The purpose of Forensics is to motivate students to participate in the program and improve skills in the five areas formerly mentioned. What goes on down in room 208 on Friday mornings? French Club! Instead of an after-school club, it is held during class. Everyone brings food to eat which has been made from a French recipe. The favorite seems to be Debbie Campbell's cookies. For some strange reason they are usually gone before the second bells rings. After the food is gone everyone settles down to play games in French. Monopoly, Clue or Scrabble. Along the food line they hope to try snail sometime but it is probable that they may go back to Debbie's cookies.

The Future Teachers of America is an organization which hopes to extend members' outlook on the teaching profession. The club gives a scholarship every year to a deserving senior. Its activities have been useful to both community and clubs. It has had a cakewalk, a panel discussion with teachers from LHS and a tea to honor a teacher. The club also has a Mother and Daughter banquet every year. The club had a small membership this year, but the sponsors and present members hope it will increase significantly next year.

German Club . . . a mad gathering in a space of relaxation. Every other Friday the club gathers to have some refreshments and play German games. The clubs have learned and experienced several German customs and had such things as slides, films and a visit from a German boy visiting in Lexington. Singing also enlivens the meetings. There are other times when it gets together. The Christmas sing and Fasching, a religious festival is similar to Mardi Gras. Everyone drinks cider in place of wine, and eats crackers with braunschweiger.

Chalk one up for women's lib! Another first for LHS was accomplished this year when intramural teams led to the advent of intermural teams. It all started in the fall with volleyball. Ms. Jamarik led two teams to victory. After that nothing could stop them. Next came basketball led by the skilled offense and defense of the main three; Marsha, Karen and Val. They played the season, undefeated, against teams from Parry McCluer and Natural Bridge, even when they shot for the wrong basket. Time was the big stigma of the track and softball teams. Ms. Jamarik just didn't have enough free time. Softball intermurals never got off the ground. However, its intramural program was well attended with girls practicing the skills of hitting and catching. Meanwhile, back on the track, they got off to a fine start with participation of over twenty girls. Sprint timings (Ms. Jamarik didn't have time to work with other events) narrowed it down to six girls who ran the 50, 100, 220 and the 440 relay at their first and only meet—the regionals. "Wait 'till next year!"

Pointing out a humorous story, Victor Coffee sets the Executive Council of Interact off into another meeting at Ed Duvall's house

A little informality is enjoyed by some Human Relations members. Resolving differences and keeping LHS life on an even keel is their aim

The Honor Council is a representation of each grade; one student each for eighth, ninth and tenth grades, two for juniors, and three for seniors. If someone is reported or caught breaking the Honor Code a meeting is called. These students judge the student who infringed the code. The meeting is kept top secret by the Honor Court and witnesses involved. This is unusual because the judgement is taken care of completely by students.

The Lexington High School Human Relations Committee consists of 18 members. It meets once every 2 weeks to discuss human relations at LHS. Its philosophy is basically the belief that every member of the student body is important and can make a contribution to the common good and that both the school as a whole and the individual have a moral obligation to respect and dignify each other.

Serving the community and the school is the aim of the Interact Club. They continued their patio project and supported a Japanese child. You could see them selling cokes at W&L games, having car washes, or trying to peddle raffle tickets for a stereo. The all male club donated to the United Fund and ran a clothing drive for "Save the Children's Federation." Where ever there is a service project going on, you can count on Interact.

Library assistants work at odd jobs and checking out books

Once each month after school the Library Club meets. The Library Club is a service club and members take part in a number of activities which are helpful to the library. They serve as student librarians, arrange bulletin boards, assist with inventory and are ready to help with odd jobs when they are asked. Other odd jobs include shelving books and checking out books. During Book Week, the club entertained the faculty at a tea. Refreshments were served and the new books were displayed.

Service to school, community, country and all nations is the objective of the Keyettes Club. In serving the school, the girls provided refreshments for the SCA district meeting and painted three benches for the football field. On the national level, the Keyettes write letters to men in the armed forces and send them gifts at Christmas. Each year they sponsor a Mr. and Miss Irresistible contest and the proceeds go towards Project Concern. Under this project, medical and dental supplies are bought for needy families.

Latin club meets regularly once a month using as a topic some phase of Roman life and culture. They sing songs, play games and have contests in Latin. These clubs, because they meet in class time, do not have set dues. They collect voluntary contributions to meet club expenses. Another source of funds came from the sale of school seals. They are affiliated with the Junior Classical League on state and national level but they conduct their meetings according to their own interests. The money is used for prizes to game or contest winners, to pay Junior Classical League dues, and to buy a few materials used for programs. Literary Club members discuss and study novels from senior reading list

At any basketball game you will see a group of guys from the Monogram Club selling drinks and candy

The proceeds are used to buy monograms for members of the club. To be in the Monogram Club a boy must be a letterman. This club contains boys who have lettered in either football, basketball, track baseball and golf or a combination of these sports. At the meetings they usually watch films of the games. In most of the sports there is no general requirement but in track they must win a certain number of points

Members of the Literary Club discover new aspects of literary works through films, records and discussions. The club functions with the intentions of encouraging the study of good literature. Many of the books they read are on the senior reading list and sometimes gives the senior members insights they can't always grasp on their own. Any money the club makes goes to buy new books which are then donated to the Lexington High School library

Both the National Honor Society and the National Junior Honor Society are national organizations that honor students who have a B average or better throughout their years of high school. The NHS honors those students who are juniors and seniors and the NJHS honors those freshmen and sophomores. They held a new type of induction ceremony for which they sent out invitations. It was held at night instead of during class hours which made it possible for parents and other family members to attend. The NHS held a bake sale to provide a scholarship for a senior student. They also sent a team of three students to Classroom Quiz which went the full capacity of seven games undefeated. The NJHS held a clean-up of the recreation field in the fall and an Easter party for the special education class at Waddell.

The LHS Pep Squad was responsible for giving the athletic teams the support they needed throughout their winning seasons.

They combined forces with the cheerleaders and gave the teams oranges. Painting several posters was an activity that involved many hours after school. Somehow though, the spirit that was strong for the football and basketball teams dwindled away for track, golf and baseball late in the year. Homecoming, which is sponsored by the Pep Squad proved to be very successful.

Meetings in the Science Club are often spent enjoying VMI lectures. One was on a Nuclear reactor and another was for those interested in medical careers. They co-sponsored the successful Lexington-Rockbridge Co-Science Fair in March 1972. Being affiliated with the Virginia Junior Academy of Science proved a hard job when they helped with the annual VJAS meeting at W&L in May. The members and other interested students enjoyed listening to the science papers contributed by students all over the state.

The SCA may be better known as the Student Cooperative Association. Every student is automatically a member regardless of grades or conduct. The SCA's main objective is to arrange a better understanding among the students and administration. The SCA does not usually plan projects until their need becomes apparent. Every year however, a senior-faculty basketball game is held. The money provides for a $100 scholarship for a senior. This year has proved to be quite busy for the SCA. Besides the basketball game, they held a school clean-up day and hosted the District SCA Meeting in October. The students, deciding the cafeteria needed sprucing up, invested their funds generously in the town paint store. The teachers and students then spent two days re-painting the cafeteria red and white. The whole project was topped off when they bought a juke box and put it in the cafeteria. The SCA then became involved in the state SCA project. Students collected glass to be re-cycled and the money went to buy peli-can trashcans.

Glass, glass and more glass heads SCA's biggest project

Scarletter staff burns the midnight oil for a better paper

Scarletter, the students newspaper

The Scarletter is a six page newspaper printed by and for the students at LHS. The newspaper is published eight times a year and is even available to former students at the high school where ever they may be now.

The Scarletter sports such things as news and informative articles, cartoons, club news, sports activities and editorials. They also give complete coverage on new students and teachers. Besides printing letters from students, the staff often will print a letter of their own for the student body.

Editor, Brenda Hockman and several members of her staff have attended weekend workshops in Charlottesville. All kinds of new information and ideas are gathered at the workshop. A new addition last year which has been continued this year is "College Quest." It provides information for juniors and seniors on colleges around the state of Virginia. Money to support the newspaper has come from the sale of ads, a doughnut sale and a subscription drive. The Scarletter staff often "burns the midnight oil" and spends weekends preparing their successful newspaper.

The Reflections here at Lexington High School is none other than the literary magazine. It publishes just about any type of expression a student turns in: poetry, short stories or artwork. It is completely a student publication. Students write the material, choose what is to be used and arrange the magazine. Compared to student printing of former years, the Reflections has now been built into a much more professional type magazine. It is larger, covers more areas of expression and has a new design.

Thespian Troupe 3009 is the student drama organization. They perform several plays each year for the public and participate in district competition. They are under the direction of Mr. Henry Baker III and student producer, Ricky Blasser. The year's productions opened with a series of three one-acts. They consisted of "Two Bottles of Relish," "Slave with Two Faces" and "This Property is Condemned." "This Property is Condemned" was put on at the district festival and received a superior rating.

INNOVATION

A small world of its own. The world of academics has been hit by apathy. Students find it hard to keep their attention tuned in class and sometimes even find it hard to get to class.

They seem to be growing farther and farther away from the set ideals of formal classroom study. The classes with freedom of movement and speech seem to be the ones that bring out a student's real thoughts and knowledge.

Even the teachers dislike having to walk into a classroom where the students are inattentive and bored.

One of the main causes of the turnover of teachers seems to be the lack of enjoyment they get out of their classes. The students don't enjoy just memorizing anymore. They look for truer and more meaningful things they can learn on their own. The students want to know.

Carefully censored lectures aren't satisfying enough. The truth all the way.

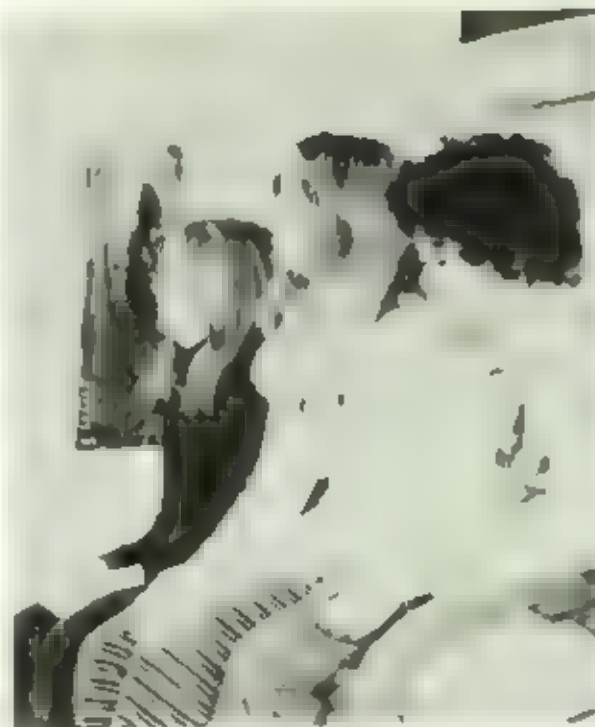

Available to the students at the high school are abundant resources. Janet Morgan makes use of the periodicals in the library.

Seeking solitude in the library to complete her homework is Wanda Hall. There are times when the library yields a place quiet enough to study.

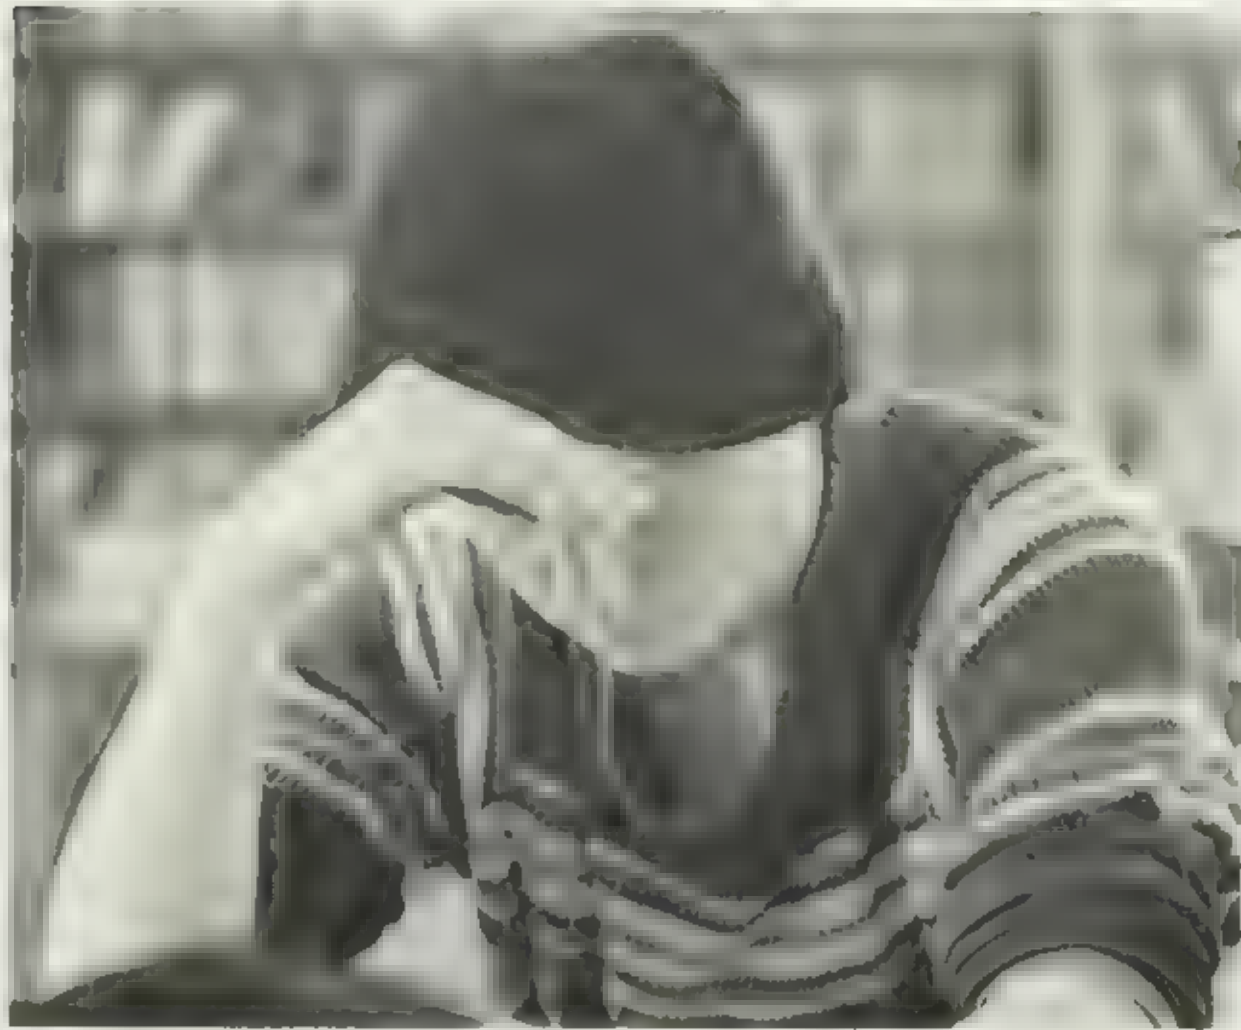

Lollipops for Sammy Kessinger are a welcome diversion during an English test. Hard at work, John Weatherman probably wishes he had one.

Enjoying their freedom and relaxation, during Ad. Comp. class, Debbie Bennington, Cathy Shaner, and Theresa Morgan meditate on creative ideas.

An unidentified soul is caught going into her locker at the end of a hectic school day. Rest and relaxation await at home.

English students sometimes use the quiet and solitude of a library for doing assignments. Tim Davis concentrates on reading

The English classes were kept busy engaging in fantasies of their own imagination by writing short stories, essays, research papers, haiku and plays. A number of novels and plays have been studied as supplementary material. New color films with accompanying records were purchased for better understanding of subjects including the newspaper, the fundamentals of writing, the history of American and English literature, and of Greek theatre. Some classes have enjoyed vigorous group discussions on religion, mythology, literature and mass media, to name a few

Other classes pursued interests of their own in independent studies during which researching and reading from favorite authors of poetry was involved. Reading skills as well as skill of communication have been stressed. English classes have frequented the library and learn to find information in many sources. However, a great deal of stress has been put on reading for real enjoyment and pleasure. The English Department also offers courses for college bound seniors in the way of advanced composition classes. They learn to communicate better and express themselves on paper.

Teachers use new concepts in the English department

Everyone is hard at work, but judging from the smile on Billy Payne's face algebra is the last thing on his mind. What's so funny about algebra?

With the exception of the department head, Mr. Lauck, and Mrs. Wolfe, the Math Department contracted an epidemic of new teachers. Other than the two units required for graduation, students are given a choice of mathematical subjects such as Geometry, Algebra, Analysis, Calculus, and Trigonometry. The succession of increasingly complicated terms and operations seems to grow without circumference as students move on into higher levels of math. Eighth grade math students are given a general conception of algebra and geometry to prepare them for more advanced mathematical areas.

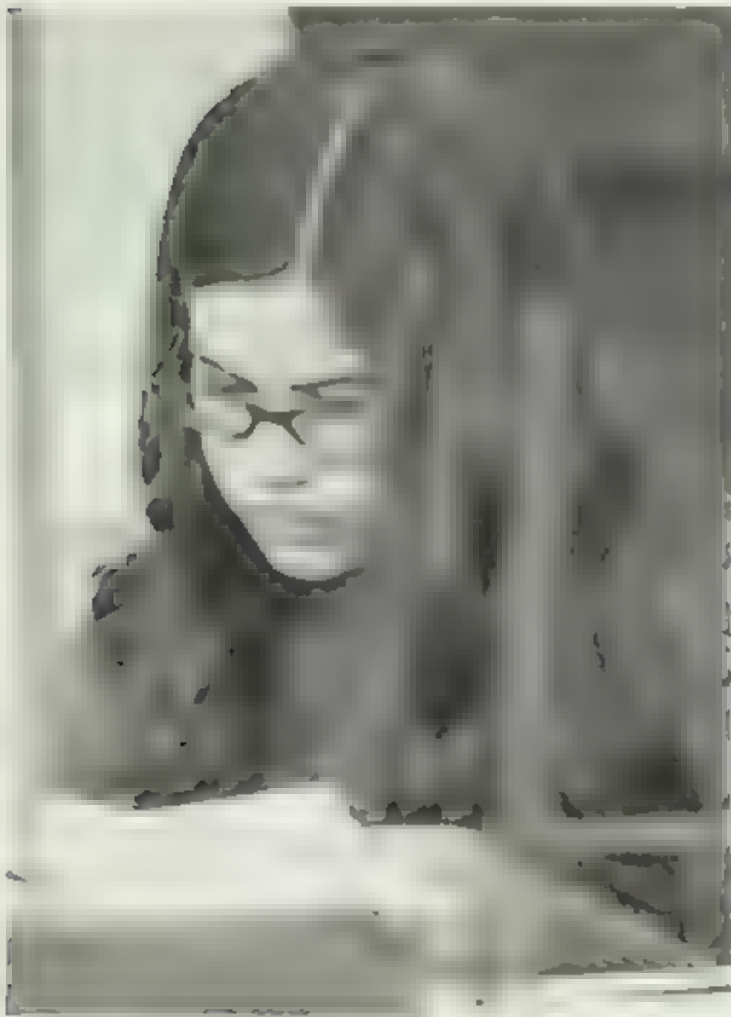

Each year the Business Department expands a little and tries to keep up with the going trend in the business world. Now, the department has received two new pieces of equipment: The stenography dictation laboratory and the electronic calculator. The business classes are trying out a new project known as the Lester Hill Corporation which involves both Steno II and Clerk Typist II. Students taking these courses plan their day within their career and work at their own speed. Some business classes have toured various downtown offices and observed secretaries at work.

New teachers and equipment keep the Mathematics and Business departments busy Examining her filing cards for typing errors is Junior Jeannine Shaner. The girls in this class endeavor to become good clerk typists.

Secretarial work takes concentration and a lot of time and hard work. Junior Pam Baker works hard filing index cards during Clerk Typing I.

Hxv8d" comments Ben Hamilton as Debbie Lam strives to improve her accuracy in typing. Apparently it will take a little more practice

Civic students indulge in the learning of local, state and federal government procedures

The Social Studies Department becomes a broadcaster of information from history to current events. The department offers Geography, U.S. History, World History, Civics, Economics, Sociology, and U.S. Government. Special speakers, Community resources, audio-visual aids, field trips and library work are integral parts of each course. Class discussion on current events is emphasized in order to stimulate thinking and exchange ideas. In preparation for college economic courses, Economics at LHS deals with recurring economic issues and economic laws. Sociology is specially designed to give seniors an opportunity to investigate social problems and to compare different cultures throughout all of human society. Government, strictly a required senior course, deals with the United States at federal, state and local levels. Students also study other forms of government in comparison with our own. Civics places emphasis on citizenship training and responsibilities as a citizen. In World Geography, the students study the countries of the world including their climate, important cities, economic conditions, and topography. U.S. History students study the history of the United States beginning with the colonies to the present as a world power.

Civics confuses Debbie Messick and Leslie Myers but it's a breeze to Susan Slater who stands by trying to get a peek at the grade book.

LHS students express themselves through fine arts and dramatization

The Art Department exposes its students to the fundamental principles of fine arts. Explored are the varied techniques of drawing, painting and sculpture with the necessary modifications at each level of study. Students are given an opportunity to work with various media in an attempt to provide a constructive outlet for meaningful expression. A working art vocabulary is developed and applied at every opportunity. The Art Department strives to meet the needs of individual expression by encouraging originality and experimentation. By the end of the year, students in Latin I have read so much about Publius and Furianus they feel they are friends. Second year students know Caesar like the 3 o'clock bell. For those who choose to continue with third year they read Cicero. Each year a few Latin scholars from each level go to the Latin tournament. German students see films on German customs, religion, and holidays. Each year Frau Dickens and her German students dress in costumes to celebrate Fasching, a holiday much like Mardi Gras. Students are required to do a project at the end of each semester though they usually turn out to be more fun than work. As a class, the French students learn their vocabulary and grammar but then work independently reading the stories in their books. They always sing though the songs don't always end in French!

Art students get together to make murals to decorate the cafeteria. These made the cafeteria gayer for the few weeks before it was painted.

The music department is made up of music appreciation, chorus, concert choir and general music. There are two choirs Chorus I and the Concert Choir. Chorus I sings at the Christmas and Spring Concerts and with the Concert Choir is the most advanced choir in the high school. The members perform at the open house, Christmas Concert, Spring Concert and graduation. The choir sends representatives to the District V Regional Chorus. The general music divides its time between the guitar and piano during the year. The Scarlet Hurricane Band began the year in new scarlet and white uniforms under the direction of a new conductor, Joseph Sayblack. The band is under the command of drum majorette, Denise Doyon. The style of the band is based on precision drill. There is a concert band consisting of 56 members which performs many times during the year. Its student director is Michael DeBoissiere. The concert band played in the District V Band Festival. There are smaller ensembles which also play in public. The band was represented in the All-County Band, District V All-Regional Band, and the Morehead Band Clinic.

Many hours of practice and hard work make the band exceptional in all they do

Building a workshop, floor to roof, electricity and all, is an all year-project for William Trussell and Bill Bailey in construction class

The World of Construction opens up new doors for vocational students. This new subject is explored by Horace Chambers and James Tolley

Vocational agriculture at Lexington High reached an all-time high in enrollment this year with a total of 167 students. These students include all grade levels in a five-year program. Combining classroom instruction and practical application, the first and second year boys train in arc welding, gas welding, tool fitting, small engines, wood-working, leadership, and basic agricultural science. Third, fourth and fifth year classes study advanced metal and wood fabrication, basic building construction, farm law, animal science and diseases, large engine tune-up and maintenance.

Effinger FFA Chapter, the official club of the vocational agriculture students, contributes greatly to the vocational agriculture program. Members of the chapter hold money-raising projects to buy new equipment and machinery for the shop. It provides opportunities in leadership, inter-school competition, fellowship, and co-operation. It is a self-supporting organization which provides community service.

Aspiring architects are enrolled in mechanical drawing, one of many subjects offered under the industrial arts program. Other students shape lumber into pieces of intricately made furniture while some learn the skill of making ceramics and beating metal into works of art. The industrial arts program is very popular because of the variety of skills offered. Several persons in the community and members of the faculty find it particularly interesting as they attend the night classes offered. The students of the night class learn the same things as the daily students.

Precision work is stressed in all shop activities

New textbooks and equipment aid science students in extending their knowledge

The Science Fair that was held at our school and the rearrangements of the eighth grade course are the highlights in the Science Department. The eighth grade course,

'Interaction of Matter and Energy' eliminates the changing of teachers each semester, with the addition of more lab work. Advanced biology students have been going to the sanitation plant each week to study the bacteria countdown of the water that is poured into the Maury River. The physics classes have received numerous pieces of equipment such as the helium-neon laser that studies the properties of light and the variable frequency strobe light that studies motion. Chemistry students receive instruction as well as lab experience.

Balancing equations and formulas still proves to be as confusing as ever. Due to Miss Dunlap's temporary absence the chemistry classes experienced two different substitutes. Although the students ended up with three different views on the same thing, they came out with more knowledge than to be expected. The ninth grade course covers introductory physics and chemistry. They learn the symbols of the elements and study different properties. Taking a field trip across the highway to observe populations is one of the many things done in Biology. Increasing their perceptive powers, the students do investigations, learn to use the microscope and slides. There are always lab reports to finish writing up.

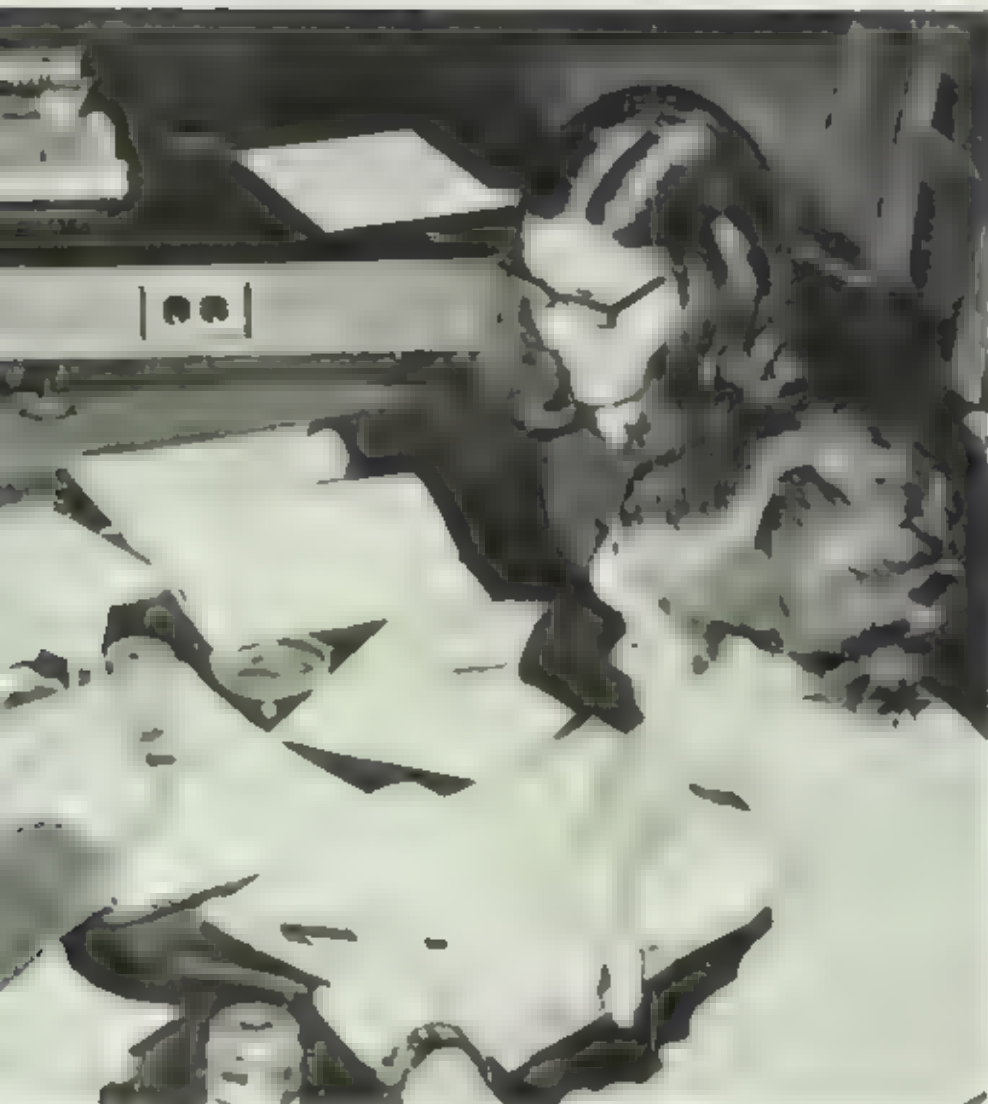

In General Science class students learn such things as weighing different materials in the metric system as these students find out.

Doing an investigation in science class using experiment results and available materials are John Weatherman and Greg Parsons.

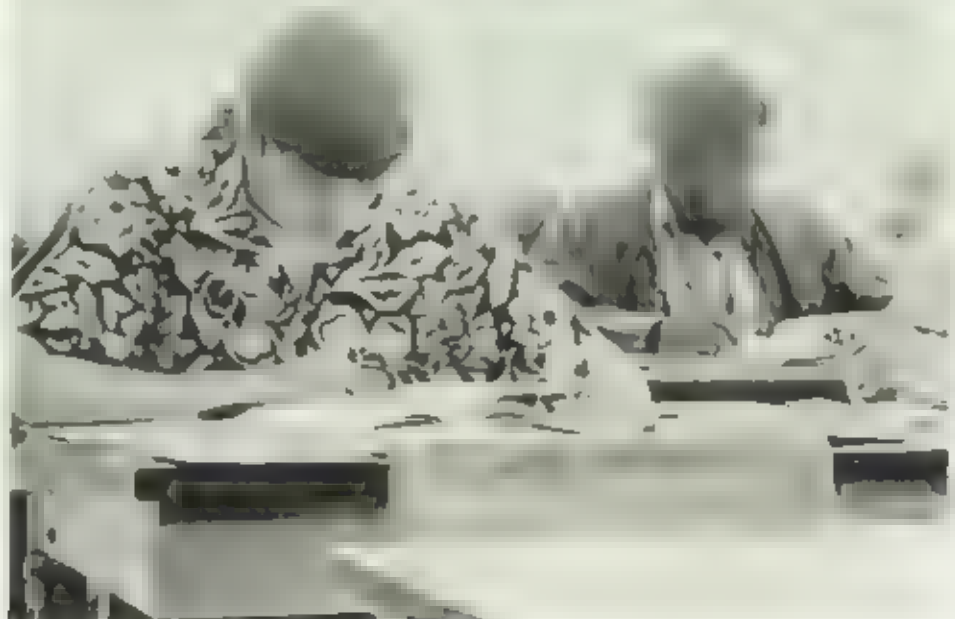

Observing Kathy Williams pour a bluestone solution into a test tube during an eighth grade science class are Kim Carter, Raynele Leech, Marilyn Johnson and John Patton.

In Mr. Edward's physics class we catch David Waldeck checking an experiment as unbelieving Ricky Basser looks on dumbfounded. It works.

Science in Mr. Coalter's class appears to have its funny sides. Cathy Conner is quick to smile when she finds something amusing in her work.

Conscientious sophomores Tony Mutispaugh and Scooter Peasants work hard to finish an investigation for Mr. Morrison's class.

Trying to keep up the good grades in phys. ed. Monty Potter makes use of his time well studying for a health test.

An eighth grade gym class learns the skills of basketball and various other sports. Waiting for class to start, they practice dribbling.

Ninth graders, Tony Hinton, Curtis Greene and Ronald Hobson take their exercises diligently. They're obviously in a hurry to play basketball.

Wrestling is one of the highlights of the ninth grade phys. ed. program. Two wrestlers are urged on by their friends as Mr. Brown observes.

Physical Education department welcomes new and much needed gymnastic equipment

Students passing by the Home Ec Department during the food unit catch fragrant whiffs while the girls spend their time planning, buying cooking, serving and finally the best part, eating their meal! The Home Ec. Department covers many subjects helping to prepare students for college and family living. In the clothing unit, pupils do not only learn how to sew but also study different fabrics, comparing costs. Third year students look toward marriage by studying child care and development while fourth year students learn about prenatal, infant and child development. The department welcomes speakers on insurance and credit plans. Included in classes is the interior decorating of a home.

The Physical Education Department has had many improvements. Walking by the gym you might get a glimpse of the new and much needed balance beam. Ms. Jamarik and Mrs. Burke guide the girls in intro and intra-mural sports. Physical fitness is always stressed; each class begins with exercises. Boys phys. ed. when the gym floor isn't available participate in rope climbing, jumping rope, and muscle building. Classroom subjects not only cover the rules of sports but first aid, health, driver's ed., mental health, and outdoor education. Never forgetting, there are state tests: Mr. Straub and Ms. Adamson take tenth grade boys and girls on the road teaching them how to drive.

An award charm is presented to senior Dottie Thomas by Mr. Thompson for winning Lexington's Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow Award.

Blood and guts, dirt and sweat . The football players, on their first day of practice were greeted by the sun's blistering heat. There was no wind, not even a gentle breeze, but practice never ceased. At the beginning of the year, no one was really sure what kind of season Big Red would have, especially the players and coaches. Everyone did know, however, that whatever kind of season the Scarlet Hurricane would produce, would be a result of hard work and team effort. The roughout during the next several weeks of practice was a never ending ritual. Almost without exception, practice convened twice a day. Physical fitness was stressed in the morning and technique in the afternoon. As a result, the Scarlet Hurricane compiled a record of eight wins and two losses. More impressive was the fact that Big Red wasn't scored upon in seven straight games. The 1971 Scarlet Hurricane team placed second in the district.

Spirit and Pride, do they really matter? You bet they do. It takes pride in what you're doing to make a good athlete. It takes spirit to keep the team together and moving. Without either of these two factors a team looks like an engine running out of gas. A team which possesses these two traits runs with perfection. The Scarlet Hurricane football squad possessed these qualities and exposed them in fine form. They faced victory and defeat, always striving for perfection; never letting up, they represented LHS with an exquisite team. Even after two defeats at the end of the season the team members were glad of what they had accomplished.

How to stop the other team is what Donnie McCormick 74, Bruce Nicholas 83, and Benjie Alexander, 34, are concentrating on at Broadway.

As the games began, the good coaching, hard work and determination started paying off. The opening game with Riverheads resulted in a 56-0 shutout. This win seemed to set the pace for the next six games as the Hurricane shut out opponents game after game. Turner Ashby was the game to see. Could Lexington prove themselves or would they crack under pressure? The end of the game proved Big Red to be victorious as the Scarlet Hurricane ran over T. A.'s defense to win 7-0. From here on out the games got tougher. Everyone knew it was fight or die, and fight they did. The fight lasted through the last game which ended a fine season for the Scarlet Hurricane.

The Little Red football squad was one of determination. They worked toward one main goal, Big Red. Day after day they worked with coaches Gearhart and Brown to improve their ability and stamina. Although the J V 's lost several of their freshmen and sophomore players to the varsity squad, they still managed to make quite a good showing.

Even though the Little Red was much smaller compared to their opponents, the offense managed to run up some pretty impressive scores. It was neither a good year nor a bad year for the J V squad. They started out a little unsuccessfully but ended the season by rolling over their last two opponents. It ended in a split season with three wins and three losses. With the young players developing as they have, Little Red should play an important part in the years to come.

The cheerleaders and pep squad, as well as the band and drill team, contributed to the spirit and backing that the football team needed.

Finding it is more fun to clean up the school than it is to go to their sixth period class. J V Telling and Barney Mitchell help ecology a little

For two years the seniors have been working towards having a place of their own to go for studying, lunch, or socializing. It seemed to no avail, as there simply was no space anywhere in the school for a senior lounge. Now, after a build-up of overcrowding in the cafeteria, things have finally come to a head. There simply was not enough room to accommodate everyone. As a buffer, the art room was turned over to the seniors at lunchtime for their lounge, and vending machines were put into a practice room across the hall. The lounge is now strictly a senior privilege which they have been given the responsibility of running and taking care of

Students at LHS join the ecology movement

Each year as football season rolls to a close, the junior and senior girls begin to prepare for a game of their own. It has become a tradition at LHS for the junior girls to meet the senior girls in a game of powderpuff football. Each team is coached by football players of their respective grades. They practiced every day after school for a week learning numerous plays and football techniques. By the end of the week, the coaches realized that the girls were actually beginning to understand a little of what football is really like. If Coach Brewbaker looked hard enough, he might have found some likely recruits for his meat squad. After numerous penalties called for unnecessary roughness, the seniors made the only touchdown of the game to win 6-0.

Christmas time is a season for giving as shown by FHA members Debbie Pruett, Wanda Shiflett, Marilyn Johnson, and Mary Sue Tucker.

French classes participate in the Foreign sing program directed by Miss Williams, as some parents and teachers look on.

As the members harmonized into a graceful presentation of notes, the annual foreign language sing came to a head. Under the direction of Mrs. Yvonne Dickens, Mrs. Lucile Weaver, and Miss Mary Lou Williams, the German, Latin, and French Clubs performed with untamed vigor such Christmas favorites as "Bien Hier," "Gaudeamus Igitur," and "Jeanette-Isabella." The turnout and quality of such a gathering makes one reconsider their accusations of dying participation in school functions.

The Scarlet Hurricane Marching Band threw in a touch of glitter to the joyous extravaganza when they entertained the public at their annual Christmas concert. Later, they gave their concert at an assembly for the student body. In the days preceding Christmas vacation, the students and administration joined forces to collect baskets of food, toys, and clothing to give others less fortunate a merry Yuletide.

Contestants from the district, state, and other states as well, come to Lexington to compete in the race. Members of our team were Robert Moore, Charles Freeman, Harry Batty, Jeff Firebaugh, Steve Smith, and Frank Leech. The LHS team practiced for weeks and months ahead of time by running miles on the track and cross country. They were coached by Coach Madison and Coach Williams. Although the team was young, they managed to pull off a third in the district. Thanks to the two other teams that got lost we placed better than we had expected. They are hoping for better next year after they have had more experience.

The fact that there were more freshmen than seniors worried many. Never-the-less, the worries weren't completely necessary. The young athletes proved to have the experience and the ability needed to work with others to form a we knit ball club. December 1st, the games began. All the pessimistic fears vanished upon seeing the actions of the players. Defeating supposedly superior opponents such as Turner Ashby and Broadway increased morale and drove them toward many more wins. Finishing the regular season in third place, Scarlet Hurricane had a bid for tournament play. The first game found Big Red on an off night. Defeated by Stuarts Draft, this ended a fine season for the Scarlet Hurricane Roundballers. Next year is the year to watch. Losing only one senior, we find returning a team of experienced, well coached-players

JV's find it hard to post winning season

The Little Red basketball team started out its season with a relatively new squad. With the exception of about four players, most of the other team members were on the inexperienced side. The young players found it rough going when they tried to get their talents together. The team, more than half made up of eighth graders and freshmen, found itself battling against older and more experienced teams consisting mainly of sophomores. Even their old, new, hand-me-down uniforms from the varsity couldn't help win the games. By the end of their season, after much hard work and determination, the Little Red team only won eight of its eighteen games. With the eighth and ninth graders moving up next year, they hope the prospects will be better with more experience.

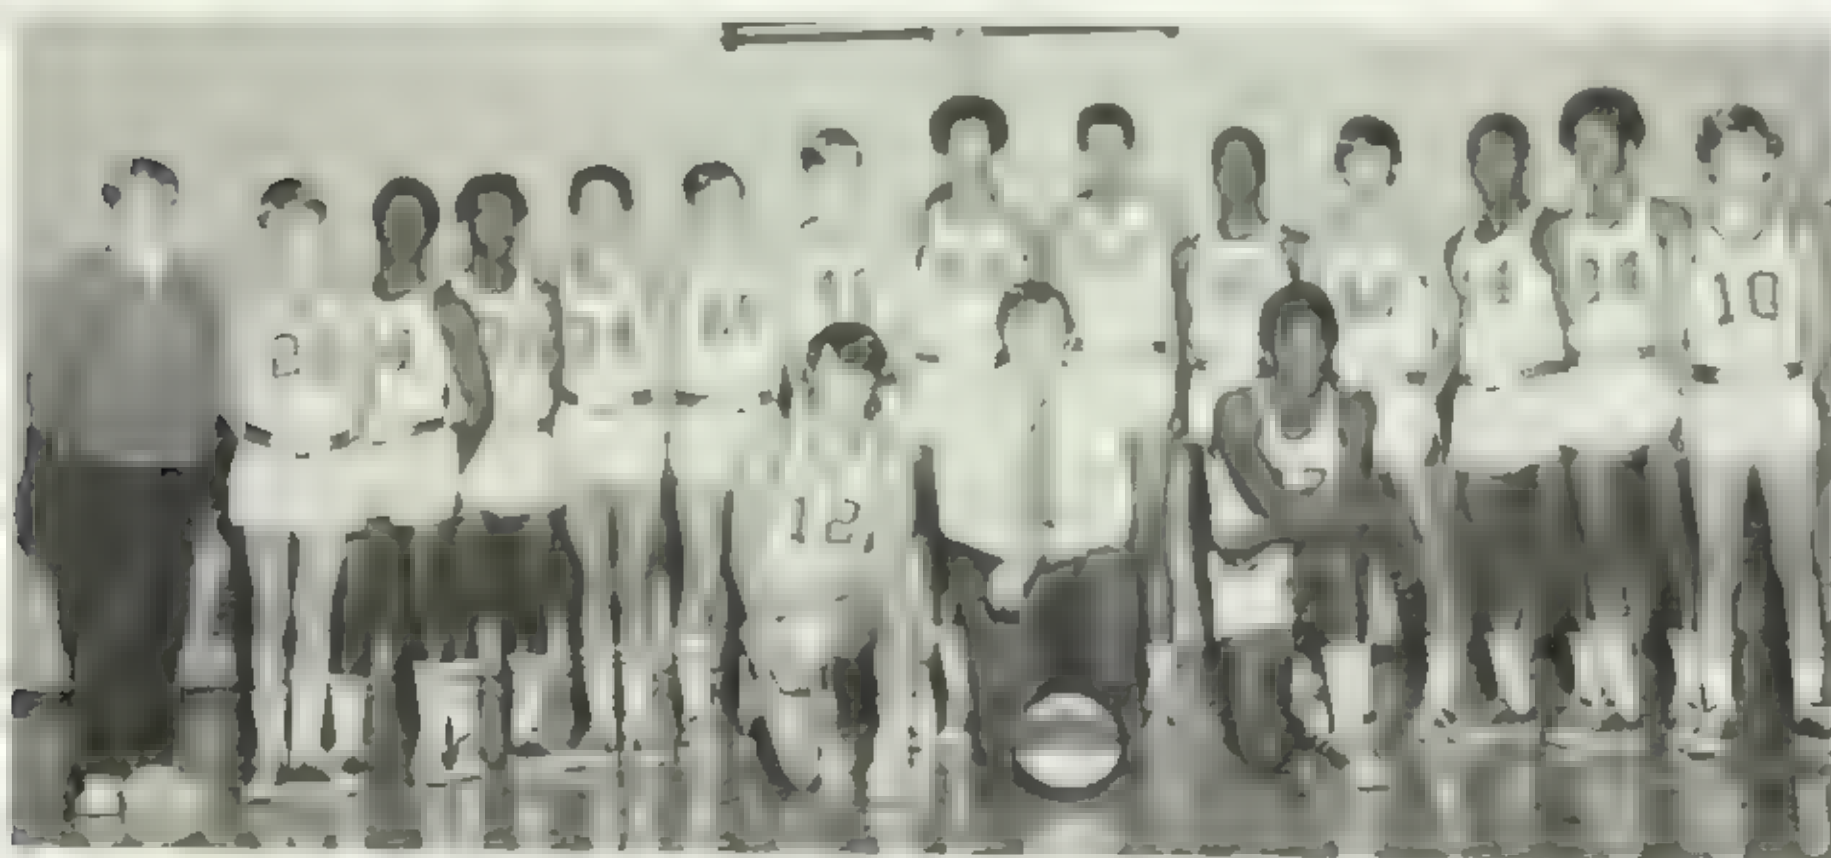

With most of the team at the end of the court, Scooter Pleasants, 32, feels it's O.K. to go up for the points with the team there to rebound.

Stretching up to his full height, James Cooper, 52, jumps above his opponent to sink two more points to add to Little Red's score.

for students at LHS

No matter what happens LHS students are always prepared. Students are always ready to bombard wandering photographers and teachers with snowballs. A good-natured spirit of fun prevails. When it snows enough for snowballs, the students go wild, even under the risk of suspension. It only snows three times; but when it does, there is an ample supply.

Even as there are times for play there are times for work (or a mixture of the two). Field trips, to gain knowledge not as easily acquired in school, are common. Culture is gained listening to symphonies. Lectures by resident professors of VMI and W&L increase knowledge and are a welcome break from the daily school routine. The field trips range from Advanced Biology's trots to Big Toilet to Home Ec's visit to a local kindergarten. Students do everything

LHS students turn out en masse at the VM fieldhouse to hear the Richmond Little Symphony. Hopefully a little culture was gained.

SCA spilled the bucket when students and faculty consumed numerous gallons of paint to change the dirty pinkish beige lunchroom into a sparkling red and white cafeteria. Quite a success, as was the district Science Fair for LHS. After hard work and determination, seven students and Mr. Morrison took a daylight bus trip to regionals. There, they discovered themselves terribly outclassed. The Science Department tries, but just doesn't have the freedom, organization, money or participation needed to produce superior research projects. With a greater attendance than regular basketball games, the senior-faculty game proved a successful fund raiser for the SCA scholarship. The senior girls and women's faculty game went off with very few major accidents. The senior girls walked off with the win that night. Later in the evening, even though the boys tried hard, they were beaten by a large margin by the men faculty.

The Little Giant, Coach Ramsey, is hoisted up to give a Brooklyn-spiced take-off of pep talks seasoned with the usual um's, and ah's.

Seniors

Several seniors find amusement when they encounter a supporter for husband's lib picketing outside the White House

The Greyhound bus station crammed with students at 5:30 in the morning was just the beginning of the senior trip to Washington, D.C. Late sleepers were quickly called and the caravan was on its way over narrow winding roads. The sightseeing began with a visit to the Bureau of Printing and Engraving. This tour found the students drooling over the piles of money they saw. Other tours included the White House, Congress, Smithsonian Institute and the National Gallery of Art. While at Congress, two groups of seniors were able to see the Senate in action and another group met and talked with Senator Spong. Before leaving the White House, a few students tried unsuccessfully to send a note to Mr. Nixon by way of the guards. Late afternoon found them at Arlington National Cemetery and Lincoln Memorial. On the way home, they stopped at a mall so the students could eat and shop.

The 1972 Scarlet Hurricane baseball team, known to many as the diamond boys, began their season with booming success. Romping over rival opponent Buena Vista seemed to give them the spark that was needed to spur them on to victory throughout the season.

Coached by Jimmy Bowen a seemingly young and inexperienced team worked hard to whip themselves into an efficient machine. The return of many good lettermen provided guidance to the "green" ballplayers. Endoctrinating them into the game of baseball was a prime object throughout the season, and proved to be a rewarding project. These new players soon became valuable to the team as they held down the fort in many tight situations. The end of the season was not quite as shiny as the beginning but the support for the team never dwindled, and the team spirit never quit.

Baseball season seemed to bring out a few more than the usual number of spectators. Students and people of the community as well turned out to see the games. There were even a few fans that followed the team to the away games. The differences among the pro baseball teams and the lateness of their broadcasting seemed to be the cause of extra spectators.

The track meets left something to be desired. Although a fair number of meets were won, the number of spectators dwindled to a meager few. After all, we can't be undefeated every year.

A job only for men, the seniors attacked Mr Clark in an attempt to throw him in the lake. It took at least twenty of them to do the job but finally after much struggle and flying dirt they succeeded. A dripping and defeated Mr Clark emerges from the water.

and Mr. Clark make big splash

Contrary to the past three rainy years, the day of the senior picnic dawned clear and bright. Three bus loads of seniors in high spirits, left many yearning underclassmen behind at the school. Arrival at Shenandoah Acres immediately found over half the senior class in the water. This included teachers and sponsors too. As much as Ms. Hays likes to deny it, she did get thrown in the lake and there are at least one hundred fifty witnesses. The seniors also managed to get Mr. Clark, Ms. Ramsey and Mr. Lauck a little wet. Most of the day was spent in the water, either when playing football, frisbee, swimming, dunking or riding the pulley. Several bathing beauties could be seen along the beach and there were only a few minor accidents on the bicycles. Everyone came home to a beautiful prom, happy but sunburned. It never rained on the seniors.

The King of Hearts is a character from the Alice in Wonderland story. The King of Hearts is a character who is known for his fiery temper and his love of playing cards. Lots of gooey white paint and a little dab of red paint went into the making of the mushroom patch which surrounded the entrance Paint and water and paint brushes and paper and paint brushes and water and paint. That's not all that goes into the prom, and decorations put up Thursday, Friday and Saturday don't make it. Planning began in the eighth grade for the Class of '73. It gave "the little ones" something to work for and to look forward to. Work they did, but looking forward was hard to do until the actual year it was to be held. Money-raising projects were held continuously for four years in the form of candle sales, bake sales, a dance here and there and many more things. Each thing they attempted was accomplished with great success as if a little bit of magic had been thrown over it. After the money was raised there was the terrible ordeal of choosing the right theme and selecting the perfect band. Controversies arose of course, but things were soon smoothed out. Many hours of planning finally brought them to the week of the prom.

The juniors chose as their theme, 'Alice in Wonderland.' After several months of planning, decorating began Thursday night before the prom and continued all day Friday and Saturday. A few steps through a keyhole brought seniors and their dates into a small mushroom patch, and they were greeted by the ever-conscious of-time rabbit. Walking through the gym was like a small world filled with flowers, cards, caterpillars and mushrooms. Everyone was watched over by the grinning cheshire cat up in a tree in the center of the gym. Sophomores and their dates served the refreshments. Music for the prom was provided by Kreemore, a well-known band from Tennessee.

The coming of spring always brings a number of different activities to the students and this year has been no exception. Spring sports of baseball, track and golf got the season off with a big bang. This being a presidential election year, W & L held its Mock Convention. Many of the students participated in the parade and at the convention as well. With the coming of warm weather, many of the classes took to the great, wide outdoors in hopes of a little mind expansion. The band and chorus also held their annual Spring Concert with lots of light, cheerful music and singing.

Voting machines

join elections

1972—an extra special event for the SCA elections. For the first time in the history of elections at LHS, the students were given the chance to vote with voting machines. For most students, it was the first time they had ever seen one. It seemed that the machines brought out more students to vote and made them more aware of what elections outside the school could really be like. Election week was short, giving the candidates only four days to set up campaigns and prepare speeches and election stunts. That week found the students walking through halls and classrooms covered with signs, posters and buttons. By sixth period Thursday the campaign speeches had been heard and the voting machines had quickly tabulated the students' votes. They chose as their President Chuck Conner, Vice-President Mickey Hamm, Secretary-Treasurer Susan McKemy, Historian Anita Johnson, and Reporter Ralph Moore.

The crowd gathered in front of the Hamm building during the recent event. The sign above the entrance reads "HAMM" and "ROBIN'S THE ONE".

The senior players were given special thanks for their contributions to the teams. Special awards given were the cheerleading award, the Jeffrey Nowlin Memorial Award and the Athlete of the Year award. The Thespians presented their producer, Mr. Chip Baker, a mug. Also he was given two bottles of relish and a dead rose. "This Property is Condemned" went to district but was disqualified because it was presented two years before. The play received high ratings anyway and Cathy rated as one of the best actresses. "The Skin of Our Teeth," enacted at the end of May featured professional make-up by Monty Cottier. Friday night all the actresses received roses from Mr. Baker. The second night Vickie Leonard and Cathy Graff were given boxes of roses and Cathy also received a mug. Cathy has acted in every play presented at LHS since her eighth grade year. Matt Paxton was given a birthday cake.

Valedictorian of the class, Kay Moorhead presents her speech, "Time Was and Time Is" to the graduating seniors

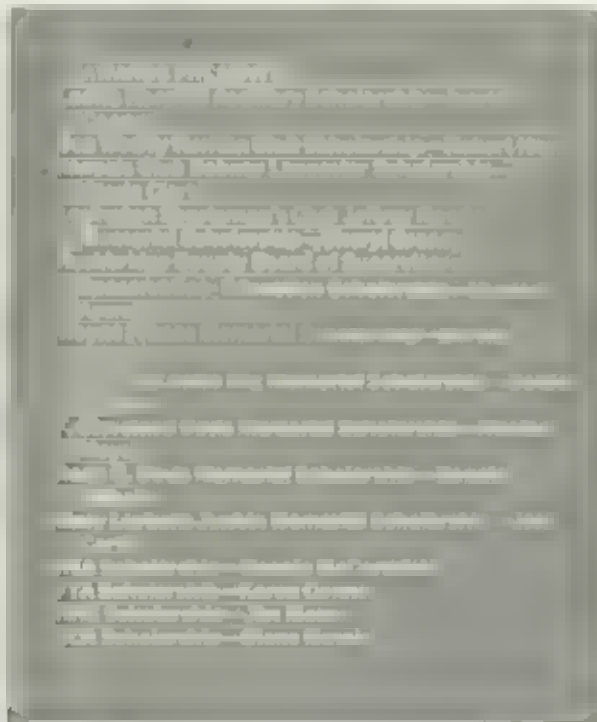

Due to an accident during the film processing, there are no pictures of senior night, but that doesn't stop us from telling you all about it. It was an evening mostly of fun and just a little bit of seriousness. Special awards and numerous scholarships were given to many of the seniors in the graduating class. After the serious part of the Program was over, the seniors took over with their part of the entertainment. The highlight of the evening was the senior flick, produced and filmed by Rob Mish, a member of the class. With all the good luck the seniors always have with the weather on class functions, the movie was so named "It Won't Rain On Us." Humorous awards were then presented to seniors and teachers followed by a skit and refreshments.

The school chorus directed by Ms. Lynn Gardner entertained the seniors and their guests with two songs from a rock opera

June 4th was the setting for the graduation of the largest class ever to hit LHS. Unhampered by rain, the class was led by valedictorian Kay Moorhead, salutatorian Donna Potter and class president Theresa Morgan. Reverend Leonard delivered the baccalaureate sermon. The seniors were entertained by the chorus singing two songs from a rock opera. A first was achieved at LHS when the seniors received their real diplomas instead of the customary rolled paper. The graduated class marched out to "Pomp and Circumstance," with a few extra whistles added. At the end of their march, the seniors started what may soon become a tradition at LHS, about 100 caps flew high into the air, a little in joy and a little in relief.

Seniors branch out into more

"Maybe if I forget the plumbing along with the electrical works it might all fit," craftily ponders senior Roger Williamson. "On the other hand if I make the living room 8' x 8' and the bathroom 6' x 5' it just might work," thinks Roger seriously after a hard day in Mechanical Drawing class.

As Brenda Beard calls home for a forgotten assignment she discovers that a wandering CRYSTAL photographer caught her in the act of slipping a slug in the dime slot of the much used pay phone in the main hall. I wonder what she thinks of CRYSTAL photographers now!

Homecoming, the last dance to decorate for. Something for everyone to remember this class for. A Myriad of Peter Max and bright, electric colors. The band dedicates a halftime show at a football game to the senior class. "I like the sound of that."

Comparisons between Gordon Lightfoot and Janis Joplin. Three Dog Night and Grand Funk. Abstract pictures... all a part of English 12. Independent study projects. Seniors learn to express themselves through writing and speaking their mind. Critical and pictorial essays. Heated discussions on Women's Lib. Advanced Biology classes make trips to the seashore and the Maury River to test water and sanitation projects.

On top of the world, senior Debbie Miller reaches for the stars in decorating the ceiling for the "Peter Max" bash at Homecoming in October. She displays the typical exuberance seniors put into their final dance endeavor.

Seniors enjoy their privileges

English opens up into all kinds of interesting facets. Secretive Rook games, deformed Christmas tree, packs of torn up cards. A Jehovah Witness speaks out on Civil Disobedience as Mrs. Hays wittingly plays the opposer. Even the temptation of visiting a beer brewery in Williamsburg did not change the senior decision of once more emerging on our nation's capitol, Washington, D.C. Attending a series of three lectures on fiscal civics. The seniors met in government classes to discuss the problems that confront our society. A soapbox for Miss Ramsey, built by her first period students. Thanksgiving project. Seniors collected used clothing to donate to the welfare department. Everyone gives up a little.

Seniors Sonny Goodhart, Barney Adams and Jimmy Macheras take a welcome break from the tedious school day to relax during their lunch period in the senior lounge. Hey Jimmy, what's that you're drinking?

selected subjects

Discussions and case studies on former presidents. Analyzing a president's life and administration. College applications and more S.A.T.'s and Achievement tests. Early decision or regular decision. Interviews and entrance examination. Studies on movie making and theatre history turned into the real thing as some seniors experimentally made movies for their English theses instead of writing research papers. This being the first year of the 18 year old vote, many seniors registered to vote in the local fall elections and the upcoming presidential election. Although Ramsey might think it discriminatory, English classes studied about little people (Gulliver's Travels).

Physics, one of many available senior courses required a great deal of concentration. Charles Boley, Rob Misk, and Denise Boyen are so captivated into their brainstorms that they are not aware of J.V. Telling's presence. From the look of J.V.'s face, physics is puzzling.

Starting out another year selling those delicious donuts? Just making the deadline for the Christmas Dance. Who in the world is "Happy"? Whose feet are those under the Christmas tree? Oh joy, I can hardly wait for those lectures in our American Studies double period would you like a pillow? Mrs Newman, would you explain to us again how Henry Thoreau invented the cotton gin? No more invigorating P.E. classes! Oh no Mrs. Sauder not another cross word puzzle? After a week of practice and a little advice from Mr. Hickerson, Tony, Billy Bruce and various other coaches the junior girls gave up a hard fought game to the seniors better luck next year! P.S.A.T.'s and the hassel of studying the blue book did it really help? Miss Fritz horrifying her class with tales from Poc. Coach Williams — U.S. History or basketball?

adapt very well to high school!!!

The 8th grade dominates more than one-fifth of the school, making up for its insignificance by winning the class competitions in pep rallies. 8th grade life brings new privileges: freedom of bubblegum; election of officers. In former years 8th graders split the year between earth science and biology. But this year they have a series of investigations and experiments. Accustomed to units, students from Lylburn Downing get back in the stride of regulated classroom study.

Civics . . . debates, pro and con capital punishment, plays, parties. Profoundly clumsy 8th graders "I think coordination went out with the upperclassmen."

8th graders set out to meet the goal of the Junior-Senior Prom "Doughnuts, anyone for doughnuts?" 8th graders are victorious in coming up with the most toys, food, and money for the Christmas Basket Drive. They give up a big party to donate money to the cause. Who could think of Mr. Hickerson in a Santa Claus suit? 8th graders did in the excitement of door decorations at Christmas. "Bang!" There goes Mr. Coalter's meter stick in another attempt to quiet the 8th graders. First exams for most CRAM. Chief Rhodenizer and Trooper Hoover talk with Civics classes about life as a policeman. Our school can be compared with a jigsaw puzzle—Put all the little pieces together and you have LHS. No one could be qualified to do this but Principal Frank L. Thompson. And wouldn't you know it, he LOVES jigsaw puzzles. He is always trying to update the curriculum. Adding a senior lounge and a juke box were just two of the innovations he backed through the school board. Students don't always appreciate him, but LHS is above many schools in student responsibility. Vice-Principal Mr. Howard Hickerson never heard the last line. Extremely extraverted, he, within a year, came to know and be known by every student at LHS.

His success is attributed to his multiple interests, which include skin-diving and hunting with bow and arrow as well as gun. He is also very lingual and tries to spend time with every student

Some people attack everything (including typing!) with zeal. Secretary, Ms. Charlotte Owens likes to tackle hiking, sewing, and "the dirt roads!"

Alas poor Yorick! I knew him well quotes Mr. Chip Baker, the Hamlet of our time. He, also, stars as drama coach and attendance officer.

Mr. Chip Baker is the FIRST attendance officer at Lexington High School, but to drama lovers he is a god. Lexington, it is commented has never done so well in action till this year. All this may be credited to Chip. Completing the hard-working administrative staff are the little known secretaries, Ms. Libby Rhodenizer and Ms. Charlotte Owens. They are the back-bone of the staff—who else would type the bulletin everyday and see that students receive important messages?

Smiles greet anyone who wanders into the Guidance Office. A singing history teacher, Coach Madison drives a cab and is active in Jaycees. Cooking up new schemes is chief or chef Mr. Umholtz, breadmaker and barbecuer. His cycling secretary Ms. Ruloff sews and plays badminton. Colorful and creative, Mr. Brooks, vocational guidance counselor, builds modern furniture and likes to fiddle with cars. Writing grandmother of the year, Ms. Price helps Mr. Brooks and also works with special needs. An active committee person, Ms. Sailer is an expert on needlepoint and crochet. The Guidance Department is concerned with others and always is extending a helping hand.

Filing is a big job associated with the guidance office but not always well liked, as a photographer catches Mr. John Umholtz's sneer.

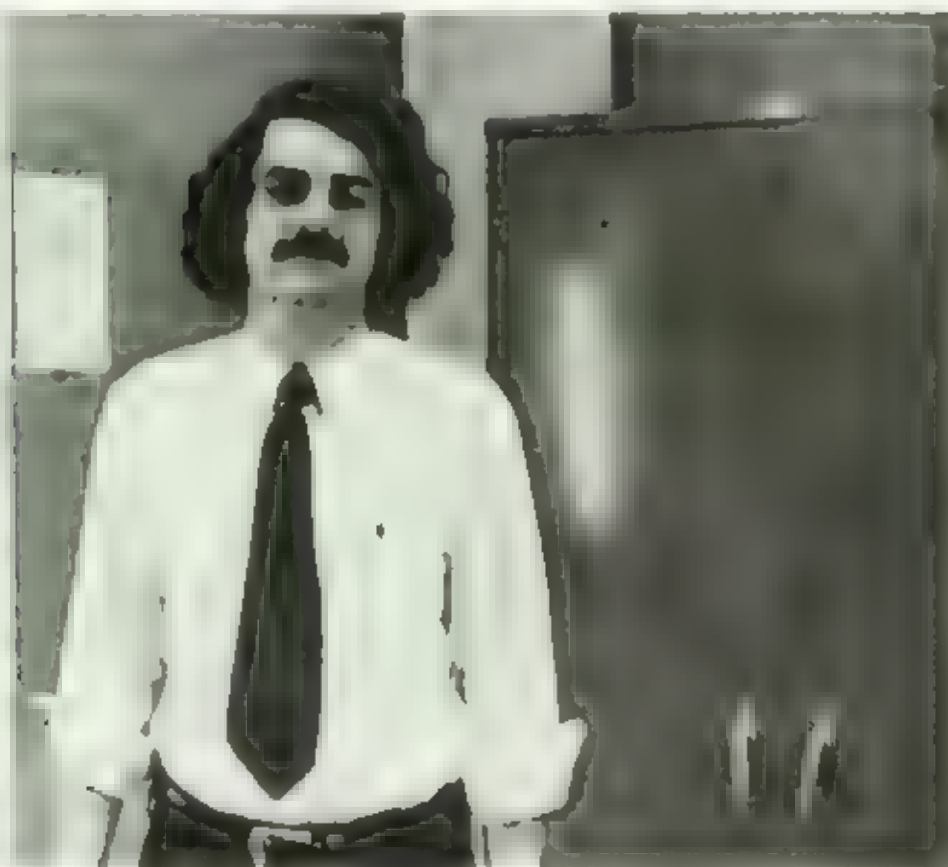

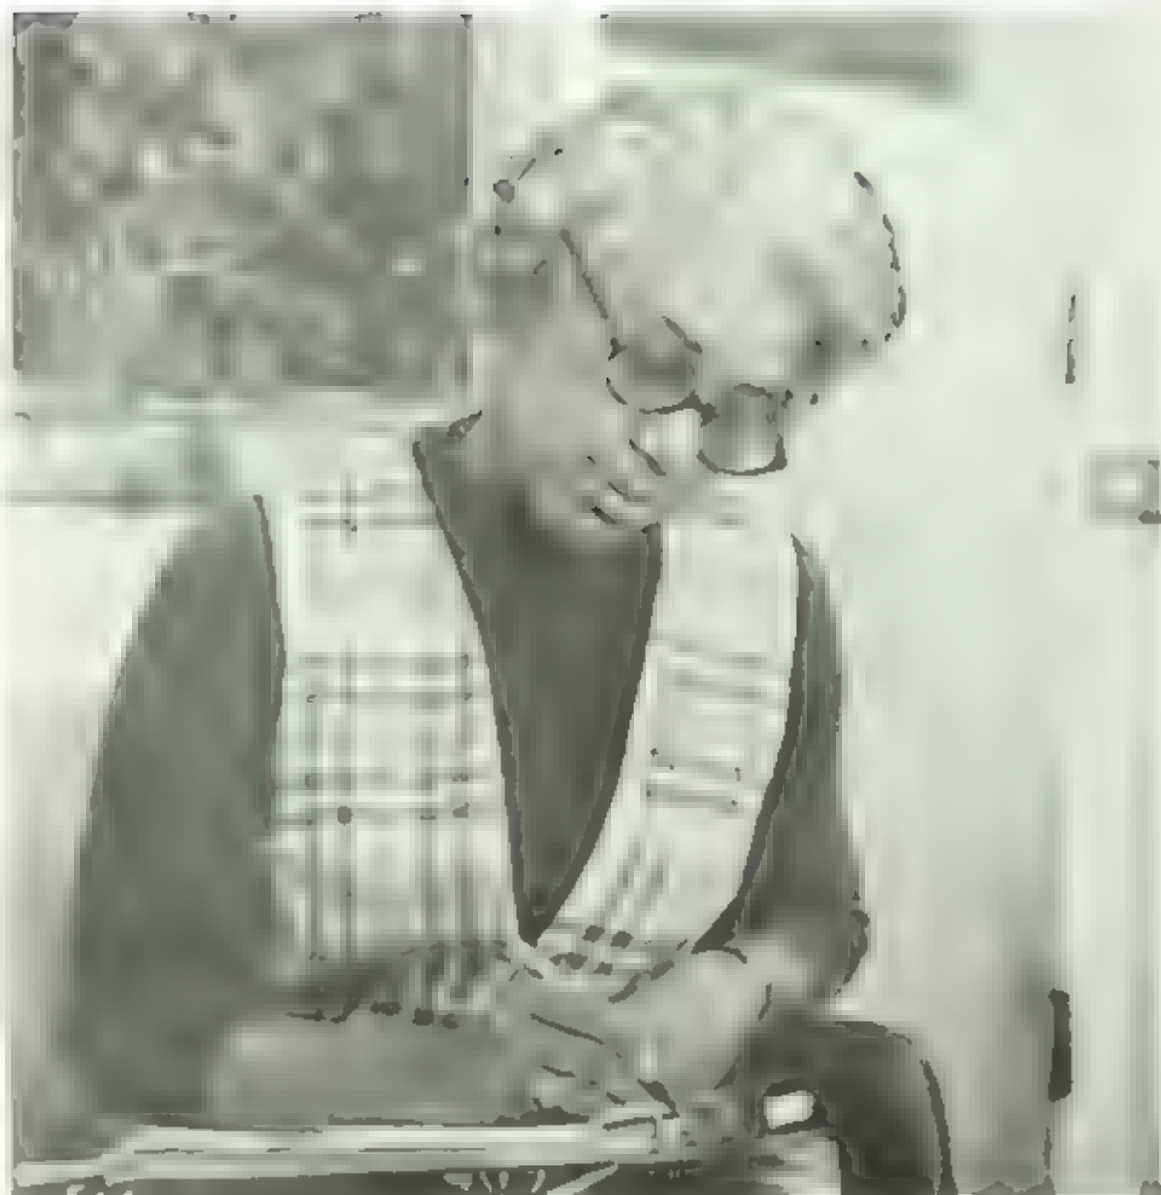

As the day wears on the liveliness wears out. Mr. Mike Madison is caught with his feet up in the air taking a breather between classes.

Walking by the guidance office, students can always expect a bright smile. Secretary, Ms. Ruloff is concerned with all students.

Ms. Adamson assembles and checks over the records for the day before leaving on another day of behind-the-wheel instruction

Sports commentator, Mr. Straub, always seems to have a newspaper with him and knows all the latest sports scores. He also hunts and according to his fellow teachers he keeps them well entertained in the teachers lounge with his comedian acts. National traveler and a summertime fisherman is Ms. Adamson. She enjoys all kinds of reading and often trades books with Ms Owens. Dear old LHS is proud to claim its very own pinball wizard Mr. Songer. He is also an avid car over as one can tell by his Corvette

Mr. Engleman teaches a night course in woodworking. Strangely enough it is mostly made up of women ranging in age from twenty to seventy years old. Ms. Burns gets a kick out of playing Rook with Barney Mitchell in the senior lounge. Not many students take that kind of risk

While at home Mr. Joseph Sayblack Jr. keeps in the music stride by practicing on his xylophone. His music interest covers all phases Band director Mr. Sayblack sometimes goes unconventional—like riding home from school on a bicycle. Most students wouldn't think simultaneously of ancient Rome and snow tires, but Ms. Weaver combines the two in a chauffeur service for teachers inept at winter driving. A spectacular sports spectator, Ms. Williams makes every ballgame and craves trips to the friendly local sewer, where she serves it up right. Best known as the cyclist of LHS, Ms. Gardner combines a full-time career in music with arty hobbies—needlepoint and sewing. Artistic and lively, Ms. Burns, a senior sponsor, moves about the school in a glowing, expectant mood after a significant pre-Christmas announcement. World travel addict Ms. Dickens displays an extensive collection of flags at her home, Flag Lane.

Taking a step toward a cleaner environment Ms. Gardner rides her bike to and from school each day. It also keeps her in great shape.

Immersed in thoughts known only to herself Ms. Gayle Turner ponders her next English class or could it be her ducks at home?

With the arrival of six new teachers the English Department takes on a new complexion. New celebrities include a Dixie Darling, Ms. Fritz along with her terrier, Dylan, and avid homemaker, Ms. Squires, with her sewing and needlework, a duck keeper and community helper, Ms. Turner, a hardened traveler, Ms. Craddock with novice driving trips to S.C. and the big one of the bunch, Mr. Clark. Back from last year are a specialist in spring flowers, Ms. Newman and a dabbler in theater Ms. McClung who loves the outdoors. It is a pretty well-rounded department.

English is a complicated language. And Ms. Dorothy Newman explains some basics, while Chuck Mutispaugh shows his better profile.

Being head of a department is a lot of work. Mr. Charles Lauck picks out new equipment to add to the Mathematics Department.

John, you really shouldn't say those things, comments math teacher Mrs. Teresa Walsh to guidance counselor Mr. John Umholtz.

Posing for a picture, busy JV football coach and math teacher Mr. Bill Gearhart tries to ignore his class side comments about his profile.

With five new faces and only two old ones, the Mathematics Department is relatively new. Head of the crew, jogging Mr. Lauck, likes all kinds of music. Coach Bowen reads, writes poetry, and works for The News Gazette. Camping Mr. Bird reads novels and swims. Water sports nut, Mr. Gearhart loves the outdoors and was a former tennis star. Diversity is Mr. Full; from motorcycling to astronomy. He also makes telescopes. In the feminine area of the department you might catch classical music freak, Ms. Wolfe tubing down the Maury River in her backyard or horseback riding. Ms. Walsh enjoys sewing and hooking rugs with her husband.

Irresistible teacher second year in a row, Mr. Potter likes to travel and garden. He is head of the Science Department which takes up a lot of his time. Photography is one of many hobbies Mr. Coalter enjoys. He also hunts and fishes when he isn't canoeing. Mr. Bond goes on nature walks, fishes and spends a lot of time with his boys. In the summer he finds sleeping in a hammock fun. He spends the rest of his time watching Walter Cronkite. Getting out and enjoying the country in his car is what Mr. Edwards finds interesting. He is fond of playing golf and photography. Growing tomatoes or cucumbers is where you'd find Mr. Morrison when he's not sleeping. He is a naturalist and an amateur botanist. Ms. Dunlap, the only female science teacher reads, walks and takes care of her cats.

Helping Tim Davis study the parts of a plant cell and how to write a lab report is biology teacher Mr. Larry Bond. No tobacco Mr. Bond!

Helping one of her students in typing class Ms. Whitesel explains why they are not in alphabetical order on the machine.

On her weekends off Ms. Barbara Winfrey plays an enthusiastic game of tennis with her hubby. Now she is off to the courts!

Teachers engage in extra-curricular

Crafty Ms. Reynolds, likes to knit and work with gardens even though she doesn't yet have one of her own. She and her husband finally bought a house they had their eye on. Some of Ms. Whitesell's hobbies include crocheting. She is a devoted sports fan as shown by her attendance at all the LHS games. Ms. Winfrey plays a lot of tennis with her husband in her spare time. She thinks her family is very important and spends a lot of time with her only daughter Chauncey, their English bulldog is also an important member of the family. Ms. Jamerick sometimes referees area basketball games. Last summer she played on a local women's softball team which became state champions. Being a new mother, Ms. Burke enjoys sewing, knitting, and reading. Mr. Brown is involved in numerous hobbies. He especially enjoys game fishing and playing cards. Coach Brewbaker likes trout and salt water fishing. He collects stamps and plays golf.

Cornered in the hall by someone, Ms. Laura Burke, gives a puzzled look as if to say "I wish I could get out of here."

The main football coach Mr. Pete Brewbaker talks at the pep assemblies about our chances and gives encouragement to the crowd.

Will these boys ever get together wonders Mr. Mike Brown as he watches the boys do or try to do their exercises.

Refinishing old furniture and antiques take up most of Ms. Tardy's time. Her hobbies still leave her the much needed time for the FHA. Taking a break from the routine of town life, Ms. McHenry likes to go out to her farm in the country. You might find her reading, crocheting, or sharpening her skills at riding. Watching after her year-old baby takes most of Ms. Henderson's spare time, but she always manages to find a moment to relax either in front of the T.V. or with a good book. cafeteria staff on the move

After growing up near the beach Mr. Ward enjoys beachcombing although he doesn't get much of a chance for it around here. He has a number of other outside interests such as reading history eating three times a day and non-stop talking. These interests do not include excruciating headaches from Crystal deadlines of which he is co-sponsor. Due to an unforeseen illness, Ms. Dunlap missed a lot of school but found time to engage in her favorite pastimes. She did get lots of crocheting, knitting, reading and listening to light classical music. Without Mr. Harlow and the cafeteria workers, the school could not function. Mr. Harlow attends every school function and is forever doing odd jobs. The cafeteria workers work just as hard cooking for full lunches and à la carte lunches. Plans for a new school and making policy decisions kept the school board busy.

Cafeteria Staff: Ms. Ruby Blackwell, Ms. Virginia Conner, Ms. Linda Plogger, Ms. Bera Harlow, Ms. Shirley Wallace, Ms. Edna Johnson, Cafeteria Manager and Ms. Tiny Nicely

"Who put chewing gum in the switch box?" queries custodian Mr. Elwood Harlow whose patience and congenial personality are appreciated by all.

Spring fever reaches LHS

with epidemic proportions

A change comes over the school. In just one year starting out one way one direction ending up another way. Students questioning everything and all kinds. A transformation of society and academics. A merging and still some diversion of whites and blacks, city and county, rich and poor. A refinement of high school living. And living it is. Six hours of each student's day spent in a classroom. Demands of change form all, students and administration alike. From cherry bombs and firecrackers to bomb threats. The retainment of tradition may be kept but so must new directions and changes be found. Caught up in the fantastic wave of liberalism

It's a happy time when second lunch students finally get to relax, exchange tidbits, and enjoy the spring weather outside the smoking porch

Sitting on his can as usual, Wendell Bradley takes a moment to rest his eyes and mind from that 'rough' reading of The Sensuous Man.

Gaiety, relaxation

Students have a hard time choosing between optimism or pessimism. The process of one-sided education at all levels is a very difficult one. The relationship between student and teacher, student and parent, parent and teacher. Learning takes place in classrooms, among the students with the teacher as a catalyst to sort of push things along. The tempo varies. Summer to autumn, autumn to winter and the solitude of winter contemplation opening up into a broad, expanding spring. Another change in final senior exams. A compromise between students and teachers. Fighting for one's rights brings about a learning process. A little push here, a little badger there and a lot of bickering all around.

tensions of school

Lazy spring days took students outside at every chance. Peggy and Beth Kenny enjoy their lunch outside on a sunny day.

Senior Tim Lowry finds a quiet place to read on the hill behind the senior lounge. Amazing, he hasn't been run over by the girls P.E. class!

Art classes worked on enlarged drawings of natural foliage. Here, members of one art class are out collecting leaves, plants and branches.

An overflow of community activities were available. The school offered its share too. The mock convention kept lots of students busy during one weekend. The school had lots of sports events, the play and plenty of other time occupiers. All remembrances not to be forgotten. Something to start out with at the beginning of the coming year. For those returning, those leaving and those away at school. It's the little things forgotten. The little things that once remembered make the big things seem trivial. Nature hit LHS with its fair share of mice, rats and "snakes." The forgotten things that once recalled lead on to others once lost from one's mind. We've tried to bring 1972 to you as we saw it. DO NOT ERASE.

Not to mention the many other things that have been going on in the school at the same time. The school is a very busy place and the students are very happy to be there.
